Nestled in a deep valley hemmed in by high mountain ranges, Mae Hong Son has long been isolated from the outside world. Virtually covered with mist throughout the year, the name refers to the fact that this terrain is highly suitable for the training of elephants. Former governors of Chiang Mai used to organise the rounding up of wild elephants which were then trained before being sent to the capital for work. Today, Mae Hong Son is one of the “dream destination” for visitors. Daily flights into its small airport bring growing numbers of tourists, attracted by the spectacular scenery, numerous hilltribe communities and soft adventure opportunities.

THAI YAI CULTURE

The Thai Yai can be seen along the northern border with Myanmar. They may at one time have been the most numerous of the ethnic Thai tribes that stretch across Southeast Asia. A large group settled in Mae Hong Son.

The Thai Yai culture has had a strong influence on the province, as can be seen in its architecture. Although a part of the Lanna region, the indigenous Thai Yai people living in Mae Hong Son are faced with very cold weather during winter and extremely hot weather in the summer, with mist or fog practically throughout the whole year. Not surprisingly they have had to adapt to the environment. As a result, their architectural style has developed into something different from other Lanna communities. Their living quarters are usually built with tall floors and low roofs, the sizes differing according to one's social status and position. Homes of the ordinary folks are usually with one single level of roof, while those of the local aristocrats have two or more levels forming a castle-like shape. The space thus provided is believed to help air circulation. An interesting feature of the Thai Yai style is the perforated designs along the eaves which are an architectural identity of the area.

EVENTS & FESTIVALS

Poi Sang Long Festival (งานประเพณีปอยส่างลอง)

This is in fact the celebration of novice ordination which the Thai Yai tribe people hold to be a highly meritorious occasion. Traditionally, the candidate-novice, his head cleanly shaven and wrapped with head-cloth in the Burmese style, will don a prince-like garment and put on valuable jewels and gems, and ride a horse or be carried over the shoulders of a man to the city shrine. On the ordination eve, a procession of offerings and other necessary personal belongings will be paraded through the town streets and then placed at the monastery where the ordination will take place the next day. It is usually held during April before the Buddhist Rain Retreat period.

Poi Sang Lang Festival

Chong Phara Festival

Chong Phara Festival (งานประเพณีจองพารา)

The Chong Phara in the Thai Yai dialect means a castle made of wood, covered with colourful perforated papers and decorated with fruits, flags and lamps. It is placed in the courtyard of a house or a monastery as a gesture to welcome the Lord Buddha on his return from giving sermons to his mother in heaven, according to traditional belief. Other activities to celebrate the occasion include dances where performers are dressed in animal costumes. The rite is held during the post rain retreat season from the full-moon day of 11th the Lunar month (around October) to the waxing moon night of the same month.

Bua Tong Blossom Festival (งานวันดอกบัวตองบาน) held during November-December yearly, the hillsides of Khun Yuam and Mae Sariang districts are filled with a host of golden Bua Tong Blooms. As merry as a daisy and almost as large as a sunflower, the Bua Tong only blossoms for a month.

At Doi Mae U-kho, the blossoms appear profusely. Finally, the golden blooms become part of the scene. Some specialists have classified these Bua Tong as weeds and because of this; they may be cleared to makeway for cash crops. Fortunately a group of researchers have discovered the flower's insect-repellent properties. And perhaps that is why the Bua Tong, a symbol of Mae Hong Son, is still preserved on the hillsides.

Loi Krathong Festival (ประเพณีลอยกระทง หรือ งานเทลินลืบสอง) Loi Krathong Festival is held on the full moon night in the month of November every year. Villagers make "krathongs" to float in rivers. At Nong Chong Kham, various entertainments and a contest of large krathongs are held near the central pond. Lamps and candles are lit all around the area. Moreover, at Wat Phra That Doi Kong Mu, there is a ceremony of releasing candle-lit krathongs bound with balloons to the sky (known as "Loi Krathong Sawan").

Tea Tasting Festival (เทศกาลชิมชาบ้านรักไทย) this is annually held in February to promote tea products of the Ban Rak Thai. The activities include hot tea tasting, tea-making demonstrations combined with cultural shows. Visitors can also enjoy riding a horse around the village.

LOCAL PRODUCTS

Being in a cool valley, Mae Hong Son is suitable for tea-growing. The main area of tea plantations is at Ban Rak Thai, a village near the border between Thailand and Myanmar. A Tea-Tasting Festival is held in February every year.

The traditional headgear called "Kup" worn by the Thai Yai is wide-brimmed with taper top. Together with bamboo blinds and Karen

INTERESTING ACTIVITIES

Rafting along the Pai River

This is an exciting and delightful recreation. The best time for rafting is from July to December. There are several eminently part suitable for rafting pass rapids and natural scenery including beautiful waterfalls. Contact a tour agent in downtown like Thai Adventure Rafting Tel: 0 5369 9111, Northern Green Tour Tel: 0 5369 8128 or in Pai district which operate the trip, some also provide elephant riding. Or call TAT Mae Hong Son at 0 5361 2982-3

Mountain Biking

The centre for mountain biking adventure is Pai district, where several bike shops rent out bikes and gear to tourists. Bike tours explore nearby and remote hilltribe villages, waterfalls and hot springs. The best time is November-May. Experienced guides are ready to lead biking parties through breathtaking back-country trails for up to a week. There are natural cycle paths through the forest, first trod by animals then beaten by man. They range from as narrow as a single person's stride or as wide as an elephant or ox cart.

Hilltribe Trekking

Mae Hong Son has several tour operators that specialise in trekking. Treks are designed to expose visitors to splendor nature and a variety of hilltribes. The adventure may combine jungle walks with elephant riding and river rafting. The cool winter months of November to February are the best time to travel. Avoid the height of the rainy season in August and September. In the dry months between March and May, the temperature can soar uncomfortably high for strenuous mountain hikes.

Morning

After breakfast, start at the top by ascending Doi Kong Mu to visit the Burmese style wat and have an aerial view of the city or sea of fog, depending on the weather. Once back to the tiny town, tour the three more Shan-Burmese temples of Wat Chong Klang, Wat Chong Kham and Wat Hua Wiang- and you're now done with the compulsory wat tour!

Afternoon

Leave the town for Phu Khlon Health Treatment to try its famous therapeutic mud and other spa menus. www.phuklon.co.th

Evening

Or alternatively, visit Tham Pla Forest Park to see and feed those happy fish and walk over the suspension bridge and then proceed to Pai.

After the mud treatments, overnight at Pang Ung Royal project (contact and advance booking for accommodation Tel: 05361 1244), located in the area of Ban Ruam Thai. The project site has been praised for its picturesque scenery. Proceed to Pai in the morning.

Day 2

Arrive in Pai late in the afternoon and stay overnight.

Day 3

Chill out in Pai, buying a trekking tour or simply biking or riding a motorbike around the charming small town which is getting more and more popular. Spend a couple of days if it is your kind of town.

Travel Agents

There are many tour agencies in Mae Hong Son town and Pai district which organize sight-seeing, trekking and rafting tours. Trekkers are advised to shop around companies that offer such tours for the best conditions. Treks commonly feature travel by foot, boat, sometimes by elephant, frequently a combination of two or three modes of transportation.
